“Our medical staff is still seeing patients with urgent needs outside of the COVID-19 virus,” said James Hockenbury, director Ancillary services, “but our focus is also on safety for our patients, staff and visitors. We are asking the public for its cooperation during this difficult time.”

In an effort to help reduce the spread of COVID-19, the hospital has also cancelled elective surgeries, restricted visitation at the main campus in Honesdale and reduced hospital access entries to only two doors during the day and one at night.
