

Bradley Serwer, MD, Interventional Cardiology

Education and Training

- Board-certified in Interventional Cardiology
- Cardiology Fellowship, National Capitol Consortium, Bethesda, MD
- Interventional Cardiology Fellowship, George Washington University, Washington, DC
- Internal Medicine Residency, National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, MD
- Medical Degree, University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma City, OK

Dr. Bradley Serwer has been a practicing physician since 2001. He was commissioned into the U.S. Navy in 1997 and retired at the rank of Commander in June, 2021. Among his military assignments are leadership positions including U.S. Navy, Chief of Cardiology and Interventional Cardiologist at Fort Belvoir Community Hospital, Fort Belvoir, VA and U.S. Navy, Chief of Cardiac Cath Lab, Walter Reed National Military Medical Center Bethesda, MD. A decorated Naval officer, Dr. Serwer was the recipient of the Senior Master Clinician Award from Walter Reed National Military Medical Center as well as a Joint Commendation Medal.

As member of the Wayne Memorial Hospital Medical Staff, Dr. Serwer performs cardiac catheterizations and percutaneous coronary interventions at the hospital's Heart & Vascular Center.